

7-MILLION STATE TAX BILL!

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

TODAY Governor Futrell finally spoke. The federal government has canceled 100 per cent relief. The state must pay part of it, or get none at all. The governor could recommend one of two things: Either a sales tax divided between the schools and relief, or a war-time system of luxury taxes entirely in the name of relief. The governor has taken the second course—luxury taxes for relief only.

Robinson and Long Clash Again Over Probe of Farley

Robinson Redicules Martial Law—"Standard Oil" Says Huey

WASHINGTON—(AP)—In the face of a denial from Postmaster General Farley of Senator Huey P. Long's charges against him, the senate post-office committee postponed action until Tuesday on the proposal for an investigation of the cabinet officer.

The committee set up a subcommittee to study data submitted to the senate by Secretary Ickes in response to a letter calling for any information he had concerning Farley with public works contracts.

Farley, in a letter to the committee which Chairman McKellar made public later, after conferring with him, denied all of Long's charges of misconduct and irregularity.

Contracts Shown

The data submitted by Ickes was so voluminous that without study it was virtually meaningless. It was made up of letters, contracts, and memoranda in connection with public projects.

Ickes said it showed one contract to James Stewart & Co., which Long charged had been favored in getting public works contracts and one contract to the General Builders Supply Corporation, which Farley formerly headed and which Long said was now headed by his brother-in-law. Ickes said he had no information of contractors, subcontractors or furnishers of materials on contracts handled by other government departments.

The postoffice committee met for more than two hours behind closed doors on the Farley case, but McKellar said there was little to report. He named Senators Bailey, Democrat, North Carolina; Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina; and Barbour, Republican, New Jersey, to go over the Ickes data and submit a report, if possible, Tuesday.

"So far as I am concerned," McKellar said, "I can see nothing in the world that reflects on Mr. Farley. It may be there, but I haven't been able to ferret it out."

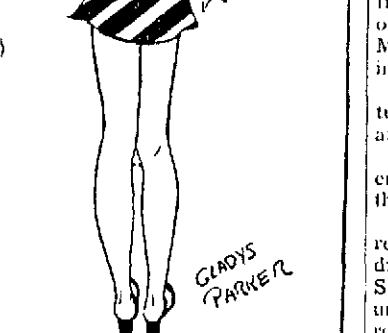

Farley said he had engaged in no private business since he entered the cabinet.

Referring to Long's charge that he was interested in the Builders Supply Company, Farley said he held one-fourteenth of the preferred stock, on which he had received a dividend of $225, and less than one-eighth of the common. But he said he had resigned as president of the company when he went into the cabinet.

Liquor Legalization Is Up to Senate

Expect Thorn Bill to Be Voted Upon Without a Debate

Balloting Not Reached in Upper Chamber at 4 p. m. Tuesday

THE LAST HURDLE

Thorn Measure Previously Passed by House, With Emergency

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—At 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the Thorn liquor legalization bill had not yet been brought up in the senate.

It is reported that Senator Dillon, in charge of the bill which has already passed the house with the emergency clause affixed, has obtained an agreement that the bill will be brought to a vote without debate.

Passage by the senate with the legislative action, making package liquor sales legal upon signature by the governor.

Committee Favors It

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The senate temperance committee Tuesday unanimously voted a favorable recommendation on the Thorn package sales liquor bill, previously passed by the house.

Senator Dillon, of Little Rock, said he would move for final passage of the Thorn bill Tuesday afternoon.

Governor Before Assembly
LITTLE ROCK—Governor Futrell, who received word from Washington Monday through W. R. Dyess, state relief director, that resumption of federal relief in Arkansas depends upon enactment of emergency revenue measures by the legislature, will appear to the General Assembly to pass such a bill, which he has drafted.

"If the legislature will do what I ask," he said, "pass this bill in three days, I believe the situation will be taken care of by the end of the week."

"I believe that not only will a war relief allotment be granted, but teaching aid and funds for unemployed workers will be restored. All the government asks is that the legislature give some definite, concrete assurance that it will do what it can for its schools and for the relief of its own people."

The government will present an reasonable demands. It isn't asking us to do something we can't do. If the legislature doesn't take some prompt action, I don't know what will happen. I don't believe the FERA will help us any more until we do something.

"I know I can't make any further appeals to Washington, until the legislature acts. If the legislature delays any longer, it is going to be sorry. We are sitting on a powder keg right now."

The government will present an emergency revenue bill which he says will produce $3,000,000 in two years, but which he will promise not to sign until the end of the session and not until all if other revenue measures are passed.

He has not divulged the source of revenue provided in his bill, but it will contain a clause permitting the governor to suspend it, by proclamation, when the emergencies it is designed to meet are over.

New Move in Liquor Fight
Intimation that a flank attack will be made Tuesday in the battle for liquor legalization came from Speaker Thorn, auditor of the House bill to license package whisky sales. He said the governor desires immediate action on the Dawson bill to provide drastic regulations to curb gambling and bootlegging.

This measure was introduced after the governor, announcing that he preferred control to continuance of present conditions, said that, if the legislature could not agree on control, he wanted a law enacted that would result in stringent enforcement.

The Dawson bill has not been reported back to the House Judiciary committee, but the speaker said it will be called up Tuesday.

Advices Schools to Continue
The governor conferred with Mr. Dyess at the governor's home Monday, following the return of the relief director from Washington. Neither made any formal statement, except that the governor urged the schools to continue.

Review of First Two Years Gives O.K. on Sales Tax

Mississippi Adopts Liberal Policy Toward Merchant "Collectors"

A CONSUMER'S TAX

Sales Under 24 Cents Exempt—2 Per Cent Tax on All Above

Editor's Note: This is the first of two stories on Mississippi's unique sales tax, which is pulling the state out of a financial hole. Today's story tells how the tax operates; tomorrow's story will tell what it is accomplishing for the state.

By MARSHALL J. SMITH
NEW Service Correspondent

JACKSON, Miss.—Mississippi today is fighting up Financial Hill, leaning upon a very real support—the sales tax.

A 2 per cent gross income tax enacted by the state raised $700,000 in four months. It will produce in excess of $2,000,000 a year, one-fifth of Mississippi's income, according to Alf H. Stone, tax administrator.

While economists contend that technically Mississippi does not have a sales tax or consumer's tax, Mary Smith, the girl who works down town, finds that business passes the tax on to her every time she makes a purchase.

Mary Smith buys two meat tickets a month and pays $9 for them, plus 18 cents tax. She eats breakfast at another place and pays $6 a month plus 12 cents tax.

Mary averages $10 a month for clothes, shoes, hats and "frills." There goes another 20 cents tax. A beauty parlor takes $1.50 and she pays 3 cents extra. The cleaner charges $2 and the drug store $3 which means another dime for taxes.

This working girl has spent $31.50 and has paid a direct and immediate tax of 63 cents.

If she goes to a doctor, or has a toothache, buys an auto tire or hires a divorce lawyer, purchases flowers or has her fortune told—up and up will mount her sales tax.

Taxed $20 on $1000 Income
It is conservative to estimate, if your income is $1000 a year you will pay $20 sales tax.

John Trader sells a span of Kansas mules to a farmer for $150. John Trader owes the state $3 sales tax.

Who Pays?
Who pays the sales tax in Mississippi? The lawmakers included 400 different trades, businesses, professions and types of industry.

If you are a gypsy the state wants 2 per cent of all the money you make telling fortunes. Slot machine owners must pay up along with ticket sellers, check room girls, junk merchants and dealers "in deadly knucks."

If you are in business each year you must make an annual report whether you have any tax to pay or not. And if you don't pay the tax for which you are liable, one of the state's "field agents" will be on hand to get the money or take you to court where a fine of $50 is possible.

There are no stamps to be affixed to articles purchased. The transaction is not directly between the consumer and the state, but between the dealer and the state.

The state is not interested if the seller passes the tax on and makes the price $150 or whether he absorbs it. But the state looks to the man who sold the mules.

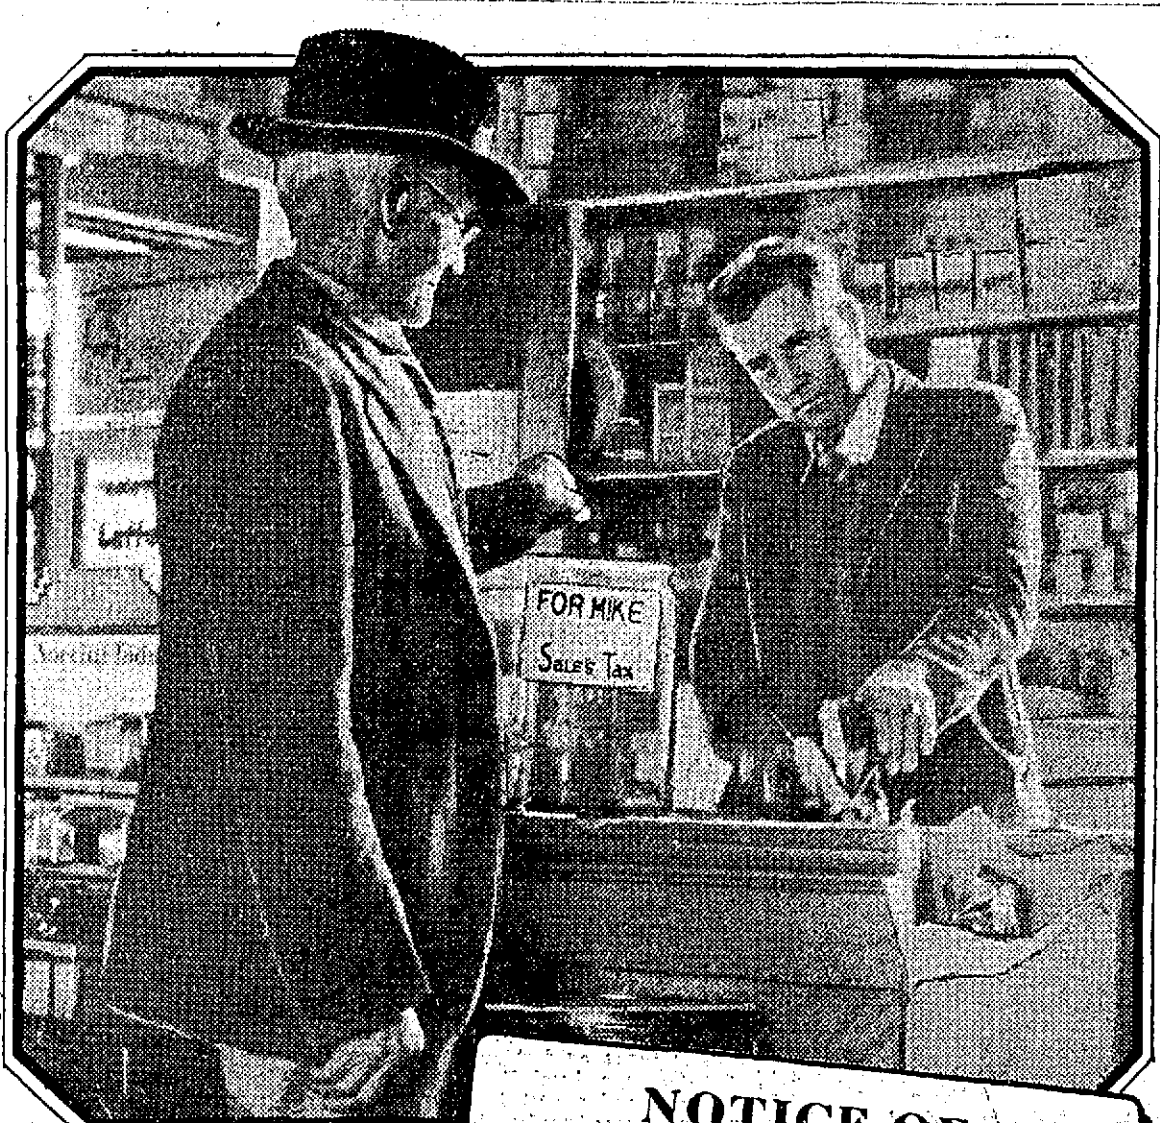

If a farmer or a shrimp fisherman makes a 25-cent purchase, he pays 1 cent tax. He has paid not a 2 per cent levy, but a 4 per cent tax. Other merchants would charge him no less.

The general rule is to tax purchases from 60 cents to $1.24 the sum of 2 cents.

The merchant may put the 1-cent tax in his cigar box cash register or a fruit jar labeled "For Mike's Sales Tax." "Mike" is the state's affectionate name for its popular young governor, Martin F. Connor. T. thousands are "Mike Connor."

Thirty-five per cent of the state's retail business is done without bookkeeping. So, at month's end the stockkeeper may decide he has sold $200 worth of merchandise. He deducts $100 exemption allowance and owes the state 2 per cent on $100, or $20 sales tax.

Small Storekeepers Exempt
If John Jones has a small shop and (Continued on page three)

"For Mike—Sales Tax," says this typical sign on a glass jar in a small Mississippi grocery. Into the jar go the sales tax pennies which are later turned over to representatives of Governor "Mike" Connor. The merchant behind the counter is cutting "two bits worth" of side meat, on which the tax is 1 cent. The chart at the right, displayed in Mississippi stores, shows the tax scale.

Liquid Copper Is Made by Science

New Process Allows It to Be Applied to Surface Like Paint

CHICAGO — (P) — Another of the scientific world's "problems" dissolved Sunday with announcement by a pair of Chicago scientists that they had perfected a method of producing liquid copper after eight years of private research.

Noted metallurgical chemists had held, they said, that there is no solution for the task of breaking down elemental copper into an amorphous form suitable for mixing into a paint-like substance, of value in resisting corrosion.

But L. D. Pangborn and Harry Sweeney emerged from their laboratory with a process which will be used in the manufacture of non-crystalline "copper dust" as soon as a factory can be completed here.

Prof. Julius Stieglitz of the University of Chicago chemistry department said he was unable to find in his records previous development of amorphous copper, although other metals in amorphous form are in use.

"Such a discovery should be of great value in the commercial world," he said.

H. M. Rice, head of the firm for which the two scientists work, said previous experiments had always resulted in the breaking down of copper into crystalline units which because of their aried grains could not be successfully mixed for commercial use.

"The new product is shapeless, non-crystalline, and can be mixed with a special carrier developed in our laboratory into a liquid copper 98.3 per cent pure, which could be applied like paint to any surface," Rice said.

Sensations of Driving 272 M. P.
H. Told by Campbell

Bluebird V reaches 100 miles an hour in an instant. Sir Malcolm Campbell doesn't even get ready to shift into high until his seven-ton projectile hits 200 m. p. h.

Campbell hopes to attain 300 m. p. h.—travel at the incredible land speed of a mile in 12 seconds, when the tide irons out and breaks the silica sand at Daytona Beach.

Sir Malcolm shot the record up to 272.108 m. p. h. in a two-way trial on the 11-mile Florida trip two years ago.

That's more than twice as fast as Gene Sarazen drives a golf ball, more than three times as fast as Walter Johnson threw a baseball, as tests have proven, and almost four times faster than a nerve impulse. Bluebird V covered 400 feet while the perfect British sportsman's brain flashed a message to his steering hands.

How does it feel to drive a land mile in a shade more than 13 seconds? Campbell describes his reactions vividly in writing his impressions for the Book of Speed.

"At the signal 'bench clear,' I shout, 'Contact!' Two mechanics spring to the gas starter. Puffs of black smoke pour from the exhaust pipes, followed by tongues of flame as the 2500 horsepower Rolls-Royce motor springs to life. The roar from my monster is deafening.

Rear End Swinging Wretched Sensation

"I engage low gear. I stick her in second gear and the flags lining the straightaway flutter out to solid streaks of color. My engine revolution counter indicates 180 miles an hour.

"I never feel happy until I engage high gear. Now I can settle myself in the cockpit and concentrate on steering a bull's-eye course. I wedge myself in with my left foot, using all my force in so doing to insure keeping the accelerator down hard with my right foot.

"A quick glance at the tachometer shows 2900 revolutions per minute, or about 245 miles an hour. I must do better. Oh, why won't she pick up speed quicker? Never mind—the entrance to the measured mile is still out of sight.

"Bluebird is getting difficult to hold. The rear end starts swinging—wretched sensation! Now comes an awful fight. She snakes this way and that. We hit a bump. The tachometer needle vibrates wildly. That means terrific wheelspin. Now I wrestle to keep her dead straight!

"We shoot into the lower end of the measured mile. I must sneak a look at the revolution indicator. By God! It shows just over 300 miles an hour! How much am I losing in wheel slip?

That worries me.

Easing Foot Off Gas Ticklish Moment

"There goes the end of the mile. Another quick glance at the revolution indicator reveals the equivalent of 320 miles per hour.

"Now comes the ticklish moment as I foot off gradually. I start easing my foot off the gas pedal. What a relief when the throttle finally is shut! Still we speed on and on. I feel at the mercy of the car. Will she never slow down? It would be fatal to apply the brakes at such speed. I must just sit here until the old Bluebird decides to

If your throat looks the least bit crepey, you probably will find that muscle oil is helpful. A few drops a day should be sufficient. Apply it after you have removed tissue cream, pat it in and leave it on all night. Be extremely careful not to stretch or pull the skin on your throat while you are using any of these preparations.

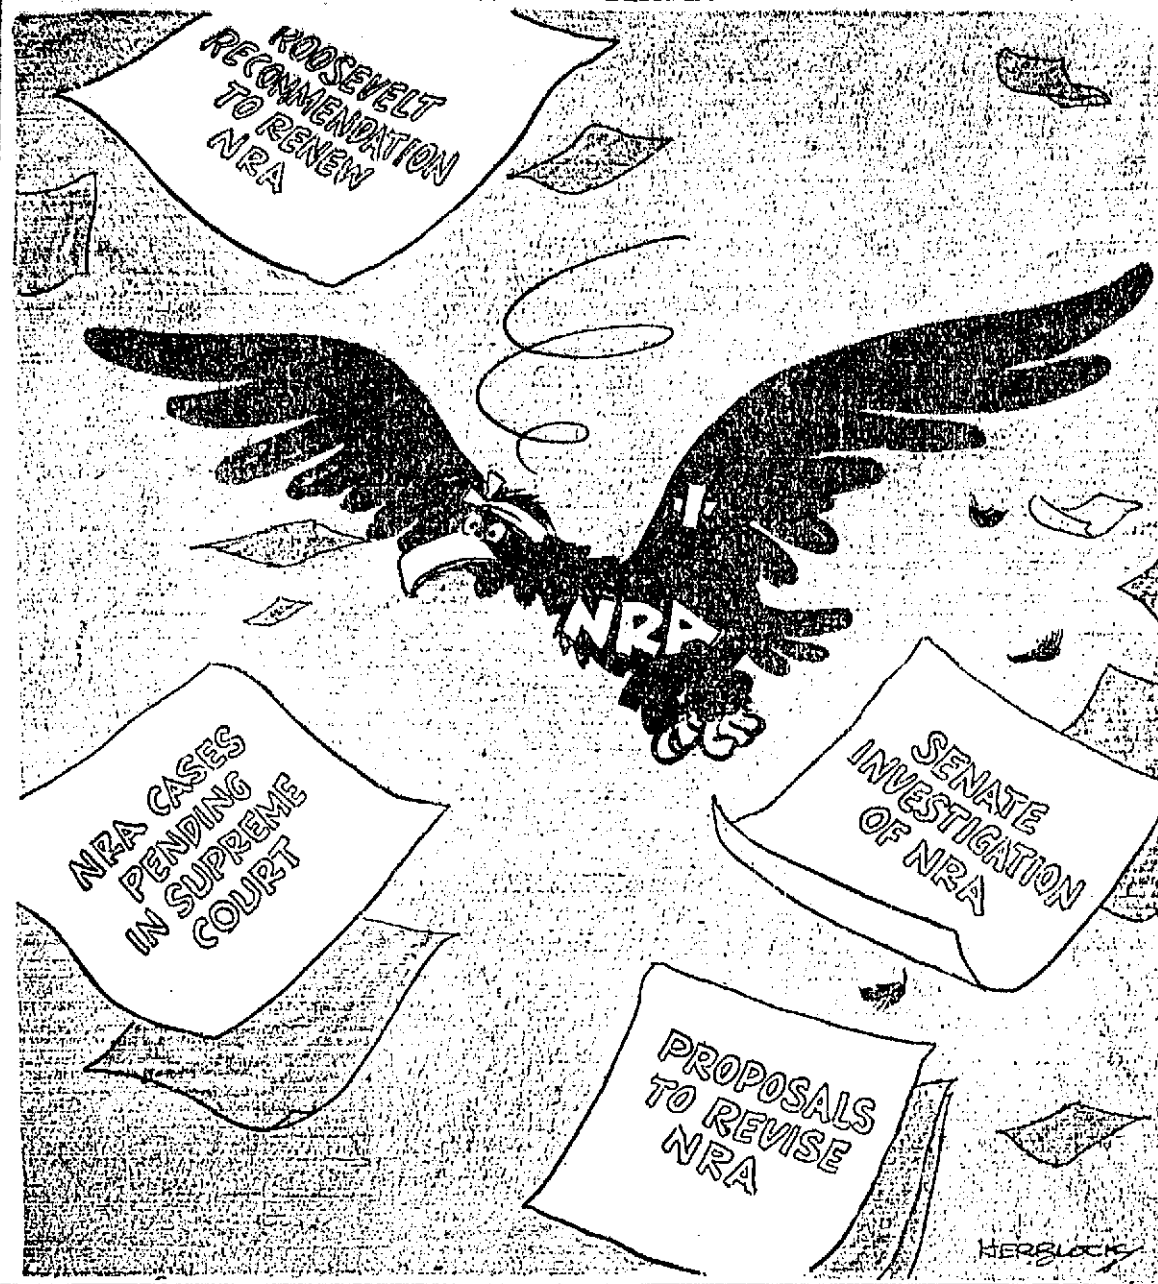

"Keep that thing out of sight!" Vogel warned.

"Sure. I'm keepin' it out of sight." There was a mildness in Stroude's tone that belied the tight between his narrowed lids. "Get yourself one of these," he repeated, nodding to the younger man.

"Might come in handy." Vogel picked up his cup of coffee, drained it and set the cup down again. "Then he pushed back behave.

"At last the speed slackens and I glimpse the motor lorries of my mechanics far ahead. Now I press the brake a bit, overshoot my gang, and stop. They lift me from the cockpit. My arms and wrists ache like nothing on earth.

"A motorcycle courier drops up. He hands me a slip reading '273.8 miles per hour.' What a disappointment! I had hoped for 300 at least. It felt like it, but that awful wheel slip cut down our speed.

"In 10 minutes the tires are changed. I must get on with the return journey—since it is a two-way trial run. I ache all over and wish I could just lie basking in the sun."

Who wouldn't?

A study of hit-and-run accidents led Chief of Police J. G. Laubenhauer, Milwaukee, to the conclusion that motorists flee because of fright and that if the drivers had stopped, most of them would not have faced jail sentences.

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Laura Lu Broekman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
GALE HENDERSON, pretty and 25, works in a silk mill. She and her 19-year-old brother, PHIL, support their invalid father.

STEVE MEYERS, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She delays giving him answer.

Gale goes skating, breaks through the ice and is rescued by BRIAN WESTMORE, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian has come home after two years in Paris, ready to take his place in the mill.

VICKY THATCHER, daughter of ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, schemes to marry him. She sees him with Gale and is furious. Convinced to meet Gale, she tells her father she is married. Brian, believing Brian has been abusing himself at her expense, is deeply hurt. He refuses to see him again.

Brian, trying to forget Gale, goes to Vicky. He falls to love her. Phil loses his job, and Gale asks Steve to marry him. Steve, feeling something dreadful has happened.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XII
GALE HENDERSON was right; something had happened that night.

It began with three men sitting around a table in a drab, ill-smelling restaurant.

The three men sat near the door leading into the kitchen. There were no other customers except a man at the counter, drinking beer, and a man and girl at a table farther from.

The three men sat about which the three men sat spotted with grease and some of the dishes were tipped. Of the three, only Ed Vogel was eating. He ate voraciously, sawing at the beef steak, cut off a huge bite and stabbed it, holding it aloft on his fork.

"They thought they'd get ahead of Ed Vogel!" he jeered. "Well, they found out different."

"The man on the right said, 'Give 'em the works, did you?'"

"I'll say!"

The man who had spoken had a flat nose that looked as though it had been broken. His pale eyes were narrow, sly-looking.

"Listen, Stroude," said the third man, "suppose some of these guys get tough? I ain't as big as you two—"

He wasn't. He was little, with dark hair, and his face was distinguished for only one thing—it was completely mediocre. "Lefty" was the only name either of the others knew for him.

"Well," said Stroude, and his lips smiled though his eyes did not. "If I was you I know what I'd do. There was no one near to see. Stroude's hand went into a pocket, emerged to show the dull black handle of a revolver.

"Keep that thing out of sight!" Vogel warned.

"Sure. I'm keepin' it out of sight." There was a mildness in Stroude's tone that belied the tight between his narrowed lids. "Get yourself one of these," he repeated, nodding to the younger man.

"Might come in handy." Vogel picked up his cup of coffee, drained it and set the cup down again. "Then he pushed back his chair. "Come on," he said crisply. "Let's blow out here."

AN hour later Phil Henderson reached the mill village. All afternoon it had rained, but the air was clear now, not even cold. Phil had been out in a good part of the downpour and his clothes were damp, as were his shoes. It was nearly eight o'clock now and he was hungry. He hadn't eaten anything except a roll and hotdog since breakfast. Phil wasn't going to take Gale's money and spend it on lunches.

All day long he'd been looking for work, without the slightest encouragement. At the last place—Trask's garage, where someone had told him they might need a man—he'd waited almost two hours to see the proprietor. That was why he was so late getting home. The wait had been fruitless. Ben Trask, when he finally arrived, said there was a job all right, but his nephew was coming to take it.

Oh, well, it was too soon to expect there'd be anything so good as the mill village. It was lighted sparsely until he reached the intersection with the road leading to the mill. Jewett's pool hall occupied one corner at the intersection, and light shone through its windows.

There were two men standing in front of the building and, as Phil approached, a third opened the door and stepped out. It was Joe Gillespie.

"Hi, Phil!" he called.

"Hi, Joe. What do you know?" Phil waited and Gillespie did not answer until he was beside him. Then he said, "Not much. Got a chance to ride over to Buxton this morning. I thought I might get something to do in the brick factory."

"Any luck?"

"No."

Phil said, "There doesn't seem to be much doing around here. I've been a dozen places today."

"Oh, well, something'll turn up."

"Where you goin'?" Gillespie wanted to know.

"Home. I haven't had anything to eat yet."

"I'll walk along with you."

THEY had taken only a step or two when the door of the pool hall opened. A voice called, "Hey, Gillespie!"

"Yes—"

"Come in here a minute, will you?"

Joe said to Phil, "Can you wait for me? There's something I want to talk to you about."

"Sure."

Joe disappeared inside the building. Phil turned toward the two men near the curb. One of them asked, "Haven't got a match, have you?"

Phil brought a package of matches from a pocket.

"Thanks."

A black sedan, chugging noisily, came down the street and halted at the opposite curb. Three men got out and started toward the pool hall. Phil saw that the one in front was Ed Vogel. Stroude, who also worked at the mill and who was Vogel's usual companion, was behind. The third, a smaller man, Phil didn't know, though he'd seen him once or twice.

The man who had borrowed the match held a package of cigarettes toward Phil. "Have one," he offered.

Phil helped himself. He was holding a match to the cigarette as Vogel stepped on the sidewalk.

Vogel halted. "Well," he said in a smirking voice, "look who's here!"

"Have you any objections?" The words cracked like a whip.

"Well—," Ed Vogel's lips parted in an oily smile. "I don't know as I have, but I if I was the owner of this place I might. It don't look good to have bums hangin' around."

"You're not the owner," Phil told him shortly. "If you want me to, I can tell you just exactly what you are—"

"Say!" Vogel's jaw came out aggressively. "Don't you try to get fresh with me, why, you—!" He burst into a series of profane epithets. "Come on!" he sneered, his voice rising menacingly. "Come on if you ain't afraid!"

HIS arm shot out, crashing against Phil's cheek. "I'll show you!" Vogel screamed. "You—!"

"The words were lost in the sound of flesh smashing against flesh. Phil leaped forward, landing a blow on Vogel's nose and another square in the eye. Someone in the crowd swore violently and the door of the pool room opened.

Vogel staggered, swung again. His fists bent against Phil's face, the side of his head, his jaw. There was a smear of red on Phil's cheek. He tried to side-step, missed. A moment more and he was striking back, but the blow was ill-timed. Vogel was on him, fighting like one possessed.

Half a dozen watchers had come from the pool room. Suddenly Joe Gillespie pushed forward. "Phil," he cried, "look out! Phil!"

Stroude's hand caught Gillespie's shoulder. "You keep outa this!" he snarled.

Gillespie's answer was a blow that snapped Stroude's head back. Stroude swung, but it was something from behind that hit Gillespie, knocking him forward. He fell and a foot struck him in the ribs. Gillespie threw one arm up to protect his face.

Voices were shouting all about now. The sidewalk was a mass of angry men, fighting, jostling, pounding each other over the head. Joe Gillespie half-rose and was kicked down. He saw the little man who was with Vogel and Stroude hurl something. It cracked against a man's head, sent him reeling.

Joe tried to rise once more. Where was Stroude? He wanted to smash Stroude's teeth in. He wanted to knock him down and stamp on him. Joe's head was whirling. With desperate effort he pushed himself up, got to his feet. He turned, looking for Phil.

A gun's report cracked the air.

Coughlin and Long Flayed by Johnson

Priest Has Violated His Holy Cloth, Says Ex NRA Chieftain

NEW YORK.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former chief of the NRA Monday night assailed United States Senator Huey Long of Louisiana and Father Charles E. Coughlin as revolutionary inciters who gravely menace the nation. Cognizant of the special violence of his phrases, the speaker said he was prepared for a vehement reaction to his words.

He suggested that "Judas Iscariot was a poor piker" that there had been a prostitution of holy office, that Father Coughlin, if persistent in his present course, should remove the casque. As to Senator Long, he said:

"Striped to the facts, and whether consciously or not, these two men are raging up and down this land preaching no construction, but destruction, not reform, but revolution, not peace, but a couple. I think we are dealing with a world of Catulines and that it is high time for somebody to say so."

Reverting to the time President Roosevelt took office two years ago, General Johnson said:

"No one will ever know how close we were to collapse and revolution. We could have had a dictator a lot easier than Germany got Hitler and we would have had one but for the president, himself, to whom the whole idea was hateful."

General Johnson blamed "economic kidnapers and political panics" and warned against congressmen who rode into office "on the horizontal coat tails of a speeding chief" only now to turn against him.

Huey Long and Father Coughlin, he said, are becoming leaders of "lunatic pipers." He assailed and decided their economic proposals.

"Hitler couldn't hold a candle to Huey in the art of the old Barnum ballyhoo," he said.

General Johnson deplored, too, "the dripping brogue of the Irish-Canadian priest, pounding home points of pure political propaganda by selling on the lives and sayings of all the saints and the very precepts of the master in accents mellow with human sympathy, musical, blatant bunk from the very rostrum of religion."

Father Coughlin's plan, he warned, "to make money out of nothing would make it worth nothing."

Senator Long, he said, "would distribute such poverty as the world has never seen." He portrayed Senator Long as a "plausible Punchinello" and "an able little devil."

General Johnson said he was certain Father Coughlin was sincere, but misguided. He went on to say:

"Covered in his designs by the sanctity of the robe he wears, by the cheap strategy of appealing to the envy of those who have nothing for those who have something, he has become the active political head of an active political party."

The priest, said the speaker, was a "bad fish in the net of the holy church." There has been in recent months, he went on, "an open alliance between the great Louisiana demagogue and this political padre."

General Johnson said he was sure his friends in the priesthood "will bear me out when I say I think we have here a prostitution of their holy office, a violation of vows and a degradation of the teaching of Jesus Christ."

"Have you any objections?" The words cracked like a whip.

"Well—," Ed Vogel's lips parted in an oily smile. "I don't know as I have, but I if I was the owner of this place I might. It don't look good to have bums hangin' around."

Cardui for Better Appetite
"I was so nervous and depressed, I felt like I wanted to tear my hair," writes Mrs. R. W. Kilpatrick, of Houston, Texas. "I would get ashamed of being so easily upset. I took Cardui at this time and after the third bottle, my strength began to mend. The pain was less. I quit having the depressed feeling."

A better appetite often is one of the first results of taking Cardui, and as nourishment is improved, many disagreeable symptoms of a run-down condition go away. But of course if Cardui does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Nazarene Church Is Organized Here

Rev. E. O. Tapley New Pastor—to Erect Church at Fifth and Elm

The First Church of the Nazarene of Hope was organized Friday night by the Rev. J. C. Henson of Little Rock who is superintendent of the Arkansas district.

The church officers were duly elected and the Rev. E. O. Tapley of Bethany, Okla., was appointed by the district superintendent as supply pastor. The Rev. Mr. Tapley will also supervise the erection of a church building at Fifth and Elm streets.

The church of the Nazarene is only 26 years old but has had a phenomenal growth. It has four general superintendents, 45 district superintendents, and a net increase of membership, 10,500 this past year. It is also carrying on a great missionary program.

The church's headquarters is Kansas City, Mo., where the publishing house is located, which in spite of the depression did approximately a quarter of a million dollars of business this past year. There are eight colleges, the one for this zone being located at Bethany, Okla., a suburb of Oklahoma City and is fully accredited by the state department of education and the Southern Association of Colleges.

Robinson and Long of Leckes in presenting the report on the PWA contracts. Long told the senate:

"I have heard that the resignation of the postmaster general has already been discussed. I have heard his resignation has already been arranged. I have heard his successor is already here."

"Where did you get the information," asked Senator Robinson, "and who is his successor?"

"I won't say where I got the information," Long replied, "but I got it from a source close to the throne."

He said Murphy was "here from the Philippine Islands to take the place of Farley."

Long said the senate resolution had been adopted three weeks ago "and things don't look right."

"It looks like something is dead up the creek," he added. "It looks like the ballot box is likely to come in all straight."

Explaining that remark, Long said that whenever there was an investigation of an election, and a ballot box was sent for, if it was delayed it was likely to be "straight."

"There isn't any circumstance to verify the very foul insinuation of the senator from Louisiana," Robinson added.

Quarrel Continued.

During his discussion with Long, Robinson said the former had been running back and forth almost every week to Louisiana, and it was impossible for him to "give us his presence so long as there is martial law in Louisiana."

He said Long asked the Louisiana legislature to "ok" bills without giving them consideration.

Long replied that Robinson was a "little concerned" about Louisiana, but explained that his frequent trips to the state were because of a "peculiar custom" that it liked to have the attendance of all its citizens.

"I agree it's unfortunate when the senator from Louisiana's attendance is required," Robinson interjected.

Continuing, Long said, all citizens were invited to appear before legislative committees and that he began appearing before them several years ago.

"Year by year," he added, "they have begun to see the wisdom of what I was advocating."

Marital Law Cited.

Amid the laughter, Robinson retorted:

"Particularly when the senator puts the state under martial law."

"That isn't true and the senator knows better than that," Long replied.

"Oh, no I don't," Robinson said.

"Isn't the capital of the state under martial law?"

"The Standard Oil domicile," Long said.

"Do I understand the capital of Louisiana is the domicile of the Standard Oil Company?" Senator O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, asked.

"Yes, but we've been trying to change that," Long replied.

Long contended that Louisiana was "in the best position of any state," that it required less relief, was paying its debts, had a balanced budget, schools running nine months a year now, that there was "no other state being run like that today."

"We haven't even got an anti-Long ticket down there today," he said.

Ship Subsidy Asked by the President

America Should Meet Foreign Competition With Merchant Fleet

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Proposing an end to the "subterfuge" of "disguised subsidies," President Roosevelt Monday gave congress by special message three reasons why he thought this country should maintain an adequate Merchant Marine under an outright subsidy plan.

First, relocations indicated sufficient sentiment to carry his proposals forward. But with the crash of other affairs in congress there appeared little likelihood of immediate action.

The message put directly to congress the question of whether or not the United States should have an adequate Merchant Marine. Then he added that if congress decided in the affirmative "it can well afford honestly to call a subsidy by its right name."

In giving his reasons, the president pointed out first, that other nations give peace time subsidies to their shipping and that "the maintenance of fair competition alone," called for a sufficient number of American flag ships to carry "a reasonable portion of our foreign commerce."

"I say to the school authorities in this state: Continue your schools," he said. "I have faith that the legislature will make some provision for them. Based upon that confidence, I am saying for the schools to go on, because if the legislature does make provisions for them, I have been assured by the federal government that this relief for the schools will be forthcoming."

Most of the teachers, whose federal aid pay was discontinued last week, continued classes, reports received by the state Department of Education indicated. They have indicated they are willing to take a chance of receiving no pay at all for their services until the legislature acts.

Emergency Fund.

All revenues raised under bill would go into emergency general revenue fund. All taxes are backed by penalties and make first tax lien on all personal property of taxpayer, and double amount of tax may be collected by civil suits.

Act would go into effect immediately, if passed, and would automatically expire on June 30, 1937.

It carries provision giving governor power to suspend operation of bill if emergency cease to exist.

Goerner Conner urged Mississippi to adopt a sales tax when reports showed 45,000 Mississippi farms were being advertised for sale because of tax delinquencies affecting 275,000 people.

The same reports indicated 11.8 per cent of the city and town property was being advertised for sale and additional thousands were losing their homes.

Faced with these conditions the last legislature enacted the measure.

But today the man who gets a 50-cent lunch check finds "I cent tax" written below. He pays $1 cents and, as a general thing, protests no more.

dods only $100 worth of business a month, he is exempt from sales tax. Yet, if John Jones charges the tax from his customers he takes in $2 a month or $24 a year, which they believed was going to the state and which stops at one's pocket.

The state can't prevent this. It looks only to the merchant and he is allowed $100 annual exemption.

Utilities present another problem. Mississippi Power & Light Co. charges the customer 2 per cent of the monthly bill as sales tax. Vicksburg claims this is an increase in rate not permissible under the franchise. In Jackson, 60 miles away, the tax is added.

Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. is absorbing the sales tax, which will mean $85,000 annually. Interstate railroad tickets are sold plus tax. Pullman fares go untaxed. Some bus lines charge the 2 per cent and others absorb it.

Utilities Pay Heavily

At present utilities are paying one-sixth of the $4,000,000 state ad valorem tax. If this 8-mill state tax were reduced through efficient operation of the sales tax, the utilities would be among the chief beneficiaries.

In advocating enactment of the tax by the legislature last spring, proponents pointed to conditions peculiar to Mississippi. Eighty-three per cent of the population is rural. Mineral resources are undeveloped. The timber industry is almost extinct.

Only 15 per cent of Mississippi's 2,000,000 inhabitants pay a direct property tax. Fifty-two per cent of the population are negroes. In the past, 75 per cent of all revenue has come from property, real and personal.

You like me best because I am so mellow, rich, flavorful. She chooses me in preference to other cigarettes for another reason; because I am so mild and easy on her throat. But you both prefer me because I am made exclusively from fragrant, expensive center leaves. That's why I'm milder. That's why I taste better. No top leaves, unripe and stinging; no bottom leaves, coarse and sandy, are permitted to destroy my uniform mildness and good taste. I'm your best friend. I am your Lucky Strike.
